Did You Know?

Your young child's brain is working twice as hard as yours!

Before pre-schoolers enter school, their brains are more active and more flexible, with more connections per brain cell than the brains of adult human beings. By age three, the child's brain is actually twice as active as an adult's. It has some 15,000 synapses or connections per neuron, many more than in the adult brain.

In other words, your toddler is processing a lot. Try to keep this in mind and give them (and yourself) a break next time they express big emotions in the form of a meltdown, tantrum, or power struggle.

This week:

We have been exploring the forest and drawing story maps to represent the 'We're Going on a Bear Hunt' story. We have been following maps in the forest to find the bear and enjoyed some delicious honey sandwiches (we checked with the bear if it was okay first!).

Next Week:

We are exploring the swirling whirling snowstorm and going on a sensory bear hunt in the forest!
